

MORE THAN WORDS

Feel supported as you navigate the first year of motherhood with The New Mum's Notebook. Divided into 12 months, each section includes relevant articles for each stage, journal pages for recording those precious memories and milestones, and positive affirmations to keep your mind healthy. £24.25, thenewmumsnotebook.co.uk

THAT'S A WRAP

New kid on the block, Otto, is out to prove that quality muslins needn't be boring. The multi-purpose essential has been redesigned in a series of Scandinavian-inspired prints, including pink feathers and a snowy mountain scene. Matching sleep sacks and comforters are available, too. From £13.99, ottomuslin.com

BEST OF THE BLOGS

The internet is awash with information but these brilliant bloggers cut to the chase with honest and practical advice

THE MUMDAY TIMES

Style writer and mum-of-three Ellie Crompton records her daily musings on life, style and motherhood over on her blog, The Mumday Times. A self-confessed 'recovering shopaholic', her posts include plenty of desirable high-street fashion pieces and lust-worthy gift guides for both mother and child, as well as a smattering of equally stylish interiors, nursery and beauty buys. themumdaytimes.com

SALLY FAZELI

As a mother to two boys, Sally's blog offers a peek into family life, from her fashion favourites to days out with the children. Having just given birth to her second son, Remy, she reflects honestly on her experience of pregnancy, sharing her hopes and her fears. Check out her Instagram for some seriously dreamy snaps, and her YouTube channel for travel diaries. sallyfazeli.com

A LITTLE CRISP

Kirstie Robinson lives with her fiancé Rich and two-year-old daughter Emilia in Durham. Her blog, A Little Crisp, charts her adventures, thoughts and feelings on life as a mum; from exploring new places with her little girl to the impact of social media. She's nifty with a camera, too; armed with her DSLR, each post is beautifully illustrated with intimate photos. The family have just moved house, so stay tuned for a peek into their new abode. alittlecrisp.com
